

Code of Conduct for Production Personnel

The University Theatre at the University of Kansas is a place where Faculty, Staff, Students, and Guest Artists come together to practice and make art. All other considerations are secondary to this mission. Because of this unique principle, the University Theatre expects the highest standards of professional conduct from all who work in its program.

“The highest standards of professional conduct” means that all action taken by all those involved in a production of the University Theatre or its events will foster the sense of a community of artists, and will create and sustain an atmosphere of trust, respect, and consideration for all involved throughout the entire production process.

Your acting, directing, design, and crew assignment in the University Theatre signifies that you have been selected to enter into this community of artists. It also means that the highest standards of professional conduct are required of you.

Any activity or action that, in the judgment of the Artistic Director of Theatre following appropriate consultation, is determined to have violated the highest standards of professional conduct, will be dealt with promptly and may result in suspension from University Theatre production activity.
